Introduction
A tale of a (possibly) orphaned girl: eleven-year-old Primrose, from a small Canadian fishing village, just won’t believe that her parents died in an ocean storm. She finds a restaurant called The Girl on the Red Swing, where everything comes on a waffle—lasagna, fish, you name it—and the owner takes her under her wing and teaches her how to cook.

Discussion
1. The names Primrose and Perfidy have other meanings. Look up the meanings in a dictionary. Why do you believe the author chose these names? Does your name have another meaning?

2. Primrose includes a recipe in each chapter of her story. Why do you think cooking is so important to her?

3. Why do you think Primrose believes her parents are alive when everyone else in town is convinced they have died?

Activity Suggestions
1. What do you anticipate happening in the story by looking at the cover? Create a new cover for the book that would represent what you think is the main theme.

2. Explain similes. Read the description of Primrose on page 3 aloud. Write a similar paragraph about yourself.

3. The second chapter begins with a bullying scene. As a group, read the taunting lines while someone portrays Primrose. The first time you play the scene, have Primrose run away. Repeat the scene, but this time call “Freeze” before Primrose runs away and discuss what Primrose might do or say.

4. Pick one of the recipes in the book and cook and taste-test it with a family member. Using a three-ring binder, create a family recipe book of favorites.

5. Compare and contrast waffle recipes. With several students, cook and taste-test several kinds of waffles. Write descriptions of the results in the style of a restaurant critic.
